Number of PhD students: 25

Language: English (a minimum B2/C1 level is required for attendance and completion of the activity)

Description:

Open Science and Open Innovation are becoming crucial in the new way of doing research. Early Career Researchers (ECR) and PhD candidates are going to perform their scientific career in this new paradigm, so they will need to be skilled in Open Science practices in the context of a Responsible Research and Innovation environment. Furthermore, there is a current movement to advance on the reform of the Research Assessment, including Open innovation and Open Science principles.

We invite UC3M PhD candidates to attend this event and discover DIOSI, an EU funded project of YUFE alliance members, focusing on training ECR and their problems and providing a holistic model for doctoral learning. In this seminar the students will also participate in the “Open Science Café” a hands-on discussion on the main principles, problems and practices that entails this new approach.

To get the credit the PhD candidates need to attend the whole event and participate in the discussion and activities the Open Science Café.
