

President's letter to the students

September 19, 2020

Dear Students,

In these first days of this new academic year, I wish to send you my words of encouragement to meet the new challenges we all are facing. I am very grateful to everyone at the University, starting with the Vice Rector of Studies, who have all worked long and hard during these past months to enable us to begin this year under the best conditions possible. I have no doubt that your attitude of responsibility will contribute to maintaining optimum levels of health and safety within our academic environment.

We are closely following the measures being taken by the Madrid Regional Government in the fight against the pandemic. At present, these measures will not affect the teaching model we have begun this year on our campuses.

It is my hope that those who dedicate their lives to work at universities and research centers to improve and expand our scientific knowledge will soon discover a means to put an end to this abnormal and tragic situation which we are living through.

Meanwhile, I wish health for you and yours, and send you all my support as we face the coming months. And I hope, that despite the pandemic, this academic year that is just beginning turns out to be a good year for all of those who make up our University.

With warm regards,

Juan Romo
Rector
