

Dear Colleagues,

I wish to send a kind message during the difficult times we are currently living in and spare a special thought for those who are suffering from the illness or have lost a loved one. Our mutual support and solidarity are essential to overcome this crisis together.

As you know, on-line teaching and telecommuting will cease between the 4th and 13th April, both days included. I also attach the President's Decision to suspend on-site teaching for the remainder of the 2019-20 academic year. Ordinary assessments are expected to start at the end of May and will be extended into June, and extraordinary assessments will take place in July. The format of these on-line or on-site assessments will depend upon the health situation in which we find ourselves at that time.

Our University continues to expand activities that were already being carried out and has implemented new initiatives to help in the strategy for fighting COVID-19, in coordination with the Community of Madrid.

I reiterate that we will overcome this crisis through mutual support, and we will be able to soften its effects.

In the meantime, you have my best wishes,

Juan Romo
President
