

University of Arkansas at Fayetteville, Arkansas, USA

Fayetteville is located in the beautiful Boston Mountain Range of the Ozarks in Northwest Arkansas and serves as a cultural hub for a metropolitan area of more than 300,000 residents.

With outstanding students, highly recognized areas of study and primo sports programs, the University of Arkansas is a major source of pride for both Fayetteville and the state.

Founded in 1871, it's the state's largest and most distinguished institution of higher learning. More than 19,000 students and 3,500 faculty and staff call the U of A home.

The campus overflows with beauty and history. Among the alumni listed are Robert Mauer, inventor of fiber optic technology, Jerry Jones, owner of the Dallas Cowboys and J. Walker Keller, developer of the heart pacemaker.
