

PRESIDENT'S STATEMENT ON THE 24TH OF MARCH 2020

Dear Colleagues,

Firstly, I would like to extend my sympathy to you all, especially to those who have been ill or have suffered the loss of a loved one in these difficult times. Together, we will overcome this complicated situation.

I want to thank the entire university community for their immense effort in transforming the University's work structure in such a short amount of time, which has been successfully teaching online over the past few days and efficiently providing administration activities and services via telecommuting.

It is likely that there will be no on-site teaching activities for the rest of the academic year, so it is very important to maintain online activity. We will adjust the University's operation in the coming days as the situation evolves.

Additionally, I would like to highlight the fact that the University has provided our country's Government and the Community of Madrid with medical supplies and other resources to contribute to the fight against the Covid-19 pandemic.

I am confident that our University community's determination and strength will allow us to emerge stronger from the immense challenge that we are facing. In the meantime, you have all of my support and best wishes,

Juan Romo
President
